

Some words from Joroslav Nyvlt on the history of the International Symposium of Industrial Crystallization (ISIC), organized by the WPC.

More than 50 years ago (in October 1960) in the Research Institute of Inorganic Chemistry at Ústí nad Labem I started the series of the International Symposia of Industrial Crystallization (ISIC). These meetings and their proceedings have become by tradition an important source of information in the field of industrial crystallization and serve an ample opportunity to the participants for personal contacts and discussions. The Symposia have been successively organized by the coworkers of the crystallization laboratories of the Research Institute of Inorganic Chemistry at Ústí nad Labem (1-7), Institute of Inorganic Chemistry of the Czech Academy of Sciences in Prague (8,10) and by the WPC-EFCE delegates (7-18). I am happy that the series of these meetings still proceeds.
